Office Hours Wednesdays 12:00pm-3:00pm and by appointment

Description In this course, students will consider a series of philosophical questions concerning race and racism. What is race? What does it mean to be oppressed? What is the relationship between racism and capitalism? What is the cognitive basis for harmful racial stereotypes? Why is hate speech harmful? Should it be allowed on college campuses? What is the best way to respond to racism? Throughout the course, special attention will be paid to how we ought to respond to racism as responsible citizens.

Goals By the end of this course, you will be able to:

• Explain how philosophers have theorized race, racial oppression, and how to talk and think about race.

- Closely and charitbly read challenging texts.
- Uncover and evaluate the argumentative structure for a claim, whether it is your own or someone else's.
- Improve the clairty, argumentative structure, and originality of your writing.
- Deliberately and critically reflect on your own views and conduct.
- Respectfully discuss challenging topics with classmates from diverse backgrounds.

Everything we'll read is either in the "Files" section of our Canvas site or linked directly in the schedule below.

EXPECTATIONS I expect you to come to class on time, having read the text, and ready to engage. I do not expect you to be perfect. I am looking for sustained effort to seriously grapple with the material, not for "brilliant" contributions. I expect you to treat me and your classmates with respect, and to get in touch with me if you have questions or concerns about the course. You should expect me to challenge you to grapple with difficult and important moral questions, to be transparent and honest with you in my feedback and my expectations, and to support you and your academic needs throughout the term.

ATTENDANCE I don't take or require attendance. But if you are going to miss class (even just to take a mental health day), I ask that you email me beforehand. Otherwise,

I will worry!

REQUIREMENTS

The requirements for the course are as follows:

- Reading responses (8%): by 11:59pm the day before eight of our meetings, post one paragraph on our Canvas discussion board reflecting on that day's reading assignment. You might raise a question about the reading, challenge an argument in the reading, expand on or defend a point made in the reading, share what the reading made you think about, etc. You may also respond to what your peers have already posted on the discussion boards. I use reading reflections to help guide discussion. Responses are graded on the basis of completion.
- Short essays 1 (14%): submit 2 ~400-word essays.
- Short essays 2 (17%): submit 2 \sim 600-word essays.
- Paper outline (3%): submit a one-page outline of your paper. Outlines will be graded on the basis of completion.
- Paper draft (3%): submit a full draft of your ~2000-word paper. As long as you submit a full draft, you will receive full credit.
- Peer review (10%): review two of your peers' essays.
- Paper (25%): submit a \sim 2000-word paper.
- Final assignment (20%): create a work of public philosophy.

If you are taking this course for non-PHIL credit (e.g., LACS, WGSS), you need to complete some of the assignments on topics related to the discipline in which you are getting credit. Come see me if this applies to you so we can work out the details.

LATE WORK

If you email me at least 24 hours before an assignment is due, with the exception of the final assignment, I will grant you a 48 hour extension, no questions asked. The 24 hour limit will be strictly enforced. If you submit an assignment late without getting in touch with me 24 hours beforehand, you will lose $\frac{1}{3}$ of a letter grade per day after the deadline.

REWRITES

You can rewrite the two short essay assignments for a new grade. Rewrites are due 1 week after feedback on the original assignment is given back to you.

ELECTRONICS

You can use electronics at your own discretion, but keep in mind all the research that shows that the use of electronics detracts from your own learning and the learning of those around you. This is a discussion-based class, not a lecture-based one. Out of respect to your peers, do not multi-task on your laptop while they're speaking; give them your full attention. I will speak to you if I feel as though your use of electronics is hindering class discussion.

ACCOMMODATION

I will work with every student interested in taking this course to ensure it's possible to. If you have a disability, are struggling with mental or physical health, or if there is anything else that might prevent you from fully participating in this course, let me know as soon as you can, and we will figure something out.
